WOMEN ARTISTS of the WEST

Women's Fine Art in all Subjects & Mediums . . . Across the United States online at www.WAOW.org

It takes the energy of an Olympic gymnast for a woman to reach for the highest quality attainable in the visual arts, to stretch themselves to achieve that excellence. Painting, drawing, sculpture—all take time and perseverance to master. For women, whose workday does not end when they return home to become the mother, the housekeeper, the wife, and sometimes nurse, finding time for their art often means walking that narrow balance beam between 'creative time' and 'family time'.

Currently, Women Artists of the West (WAOW) has over 260 of these remarkable artistic athletes. They excel in a wide variety of genres and mediums. Members work both in their indoor studios and on location, or 'en plein air'. They paint and sculpt still life and floral, landscapes and seascapes, figures and portraits, rural life and cityscapes, old west or contemporary west, wildlife and domestic animals, even historical events. Styles vary as well and include abstract, impressionism, expressionism, realism, representational and contemporary. Regardless of genre or medium, the common thread of WAOW artists is the passion for their work and the desire to express the joy and beauty of the world around them. A woman's place is no longer simply in the home, but at the easel or the sculpting stand. They do it all!

Our Beginnings as Women Artists of the American West . . .

Women Artists of the American West (WAOAW) was founded in 1971 in Norco, California by a small group of women wanting to network as professionals and compete in the world of art. They pooled their efforts and began promoting their careers with shows and advertising. WAOAW soon became known for its high caliber of artists and distinctive western style.

Their debut exhibit was held in Palm Springs, California. They continued to show in locations such as the Cowgirl Hall of Fame in Fort Worth, Texas, in Las Vegas, Nevada, and then on to other areas of the country including New Mexico, Colorado, Wyoming, Mississippi, and Arizona. In these early years, the membership was limited to 35, each of whom played an active role, investing time and money in shows and advertisements to promote their professional growth. Eventually the decision was made to increase membership in order to support the increasing demands for financing and coordinating the group's activities.

WAOAW artists were known for their western pieces in various media. However, as many women artists in non-western genres wanted to become a part of the group's legacy, in 1988 the bylaws were changed to embrace additional genre, subject matter and style. The membership chose to drop "American" from their name and became what is known today as Women Artists of the West.

Women Artists of the West as it is today . . .

This non-profit organization has specific objectives that include uniting women artists and promoting appreciation of art created by women. WAOW still encourages technical excellence by educating artists and the public both through exhibitions and workshops. But in its decades of growth, the group experienced many changes.

WAOW no longer consists of only western artists, living only in the West. New members are juried into the group every year, and within the realm of fine art, the application includes no restriction on genre, subject matter or location. The membership of WAOW now encompasses creative women living across and throughout the country, with members in more than 30 states and even Canada. Some members live in remote areas, others in suburbia, the fast-paced city, or remote rural areas. Regardless, the organization does its best to provide publicity opportunities and national awareness for all of these members through advertising and its web presence.

During the past ten years, WAOW has exhibited in larger and more prestigious venues. The group has shown in Illinois, Texas, Colorado, and Wyoming. 2014 finds us at the lovely Women's Museum of California.

WAOW's members are all given visibility to collectors on the group's website and most of WAOW's information, including membership interaction is now by email or the use of the member's section of the website. While the group encourages professionalism by advising women artists regarding business practices or opportunities, one of WAOW's main strengths is its ability to develop a spirit of unity and camaraderie among its members. Members help each other, and of course, numerous WAOW members share their expertise with the general public, too, through workshops, books on art technique, and annual exhibitions.

The fine artwork of various genres and mediums in this exhibition has been through a stringent selection process, and the members who have already been juried into this prestigious organization must then be juried into the show as well. Where it counts—in the professionalism of their visibility as fine artists and in the excellence of their creative work—as WAOW members do across the country, these women find a common ground.

The common thread of WAOW artists is the passion for their work . . .
